For the reasons stated below, the Motions are denied.

On April 21, 2016 (the “Petition Date”), SunEdison, Inc. (“SunEdison”) and twenty-five affiliates filed chapter 11 petitions.<sup>2</sup> SunEdison is a holding company that, along with approximately two thousand direct and indirect debtor and non-debtor affiliates, is in the business of developing, operating and selling renewable energy projects.

<sup>2</sup> Since then, several other affiliates have commenced chapter 11 cases in this Court (collectively, with the initial twenty-six debtors, the “Debtors”). The current universe of Debtors is identified in footnote 1.

Beginning on May 20, 2016 and continuing over the course of these chapter 11 cases, Miller has submitted nearly two dozen emails to the Court questioning the competence and integrity of the Debtors and their professionals. (See, e.g., Letter Re: Concerns Filed by Stephen Miller, filed May 20, 2016 (ECF Doc. # 355) (threatening to sue Debtors' counsel due to counsel's purported lack of understanding of "the unique features of [SunEdison]"); Letter Dated 5/21/16 Re: Shareholder Concerns Filed by Stephen Miller, filed May 23, 2016 ("May 21 Letter") (ECF Doc. # 379) (alleging that the Debtors' counsel is engaged in a scheme "intended to destroy the value of [SunEdison] shareholders").)

The various Motions have raised the level of accusatory, incendiary language. They criticize former management (Bid Prevention Motion I at ¶ 4) (referring to the "flagrant crimes of embezzlement by the management who fleeced the shareholders. Like most criminals this entire group of mismanagement had glaring mental defects"); Choice Motion at ¶ 5) (referring to the "psychotic and criminal decisions of the prior management who have been terminated and should be prosecuted"); Debtors' counsel (Plan Motion at ¶ 2) (referring to a "glaring mistake by counsel representing the debtors who have victimized the sune shareholders while counsel ignores or covers up fraud that created the bankruptcy"); KPMG (Investigation Motion at ¶ 3) (referring to the "criminal acts of KPMG (destroyed the financial records)"); the FBI and/or the SEC (Fraud Motion at ¶ 4) ("The FBI and SEC are too incompetent to realize the fraud."); (Bid Prevention Motion I at ¶ 5) ("The FBI's inability to discern probable cause of this and other glaring criminal events by Carlos Domenech is glaring incompetence.") and Goldman Sachs (Investigation Motion at ¶ 2) (likening Goldman Sachs to a "gang rapist”). Miller also accuses the prepetition lenders of conspiring with management to make loans the lenders knew management would embezzle and the Debtors could never repay.<sup>3</sup> (Second Investigation Motion at ¶¶ 1-2) (referring to an active conspiracy between the lenders and management to bankrupt the shareholders through bogus, criminal loans to support a “massive embezzlement scheme”); (Bid Prevention Motion II at ¶ 2) (stating that “the lenders have no legitimate claim on loans made while lenders knew sune could never repay”).) Generally, Miller wants to stop sales of the Debtors’ assets or distributions to its lenders until an appropriate criminal investigation has been concluded. (E.g., Investigation Motion at ¶ 3; see Bid Prevention Motion II at ¶ 2.)

The Court declines to stay the proceedings or, to the extent requested, order an investigation into the criminal activity alleged by Miller. The nub of Miller’s economic argument is that the Debtors’ business is sound and solvent (once the prepetition debt is cancelled based on the lenders’ fraud and the insurance underwriters that received premiums to indemnify the Debtors’ management and KPMG are required to pay) and should not be sold piecemeal. He also argues in the Choice Motion that the Debtors should not be allowed to sell project assets “until financial statements are deemed accurate by the court and the SEC.” (Choice Motion at ¶ 6.)

The Court previously concluded that the Debtors appeared to be “hopelessly insolvent” when it declined to appoint an official equity committee. In re SunEdison, Inc., 556 B.R. 94 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016). While the Court did not determine the value of the Debtors’ assets, Miller has offered nothing but speculation to contradict the <sup>3</sup> Miller does not explain why a lender would make a loan it knew could not be repaid.

Court's conclusion that their assets are worth less than their debts. Miller remains free to object when the Debtors seek approval of specific transactions, as he has in the past, but he has failed to demonstrate that the debtors' management should be precluded from exercising its business judgment, and if it deems it appropriate, selling assets owned by the Debtors.

Nor has he shown any factual or legal basis for this Court to conduct its own investigation or refer any matter for investigation to the Department of Justice. The Court is not an investigative body and does not "order" the Department of Justice to investigate anything. Under 18 U.S.C. § 3057, the Court is required to report to the United States Attorney the details of any violation of title 18, chapter 9 that it has "reasonable grounds for believing" has been committed. It is then up to the Department of Justice to decide whether an investigation is warranted.

Notwithstanding his inflammatory language, Miller has not offered facts that support a reasonable belief that a bankruptcy crime has occurred or that an investigation is appropriate. Rather, Miller focuses on two pre-bankruptcy events: the Debtors' failed merger with Vivint and the payments to KPMG whose computer system allegedly obliterated the Debtors' financial records. (Plan Motion at ¶ 1.) The Department of Justice and the SEC are already investigating the failed merger, and Miller has not identified any facts suggesting that KPMG intentionally destroyed the Debtors' records or committed a criminal act related to those records. Miller is free to deal directly with the Department of Justice if he believes a crime has been committed.

Finally, the Court declines to hold a chambers conference with Miller so he can gauge the Court's agreement to an exit strategy pursuant to which Bank of America will commit to finance the Debtors' emergence from bankruptcy. The Court does not pre-approve proposed plans. Miller may discuss his proposed plan with the Debtors and/or anyone else willing to speak with him or propose his own plan once exclusivity terminates. If he does, the Court will determine whether it can be confirmed under Bankruptcy Code § 1129.

Accordingly, the Motions are denied.

So ordered.
